"The holistic training of the ESSEC PhD Program, targeting various facets of being a researcher/professor, along with the diverse PhD cohorts, makes the program stand out from the rest. Each student goes through challenging but ultimately fulfilling experiences such as doing coursework, carrying out research projects, and navigating the French and PhD life. I am grateful for my supervisors in guiding my pursuit of different methodologies/topics, and for the program in providing support (financial and service) for my research."

"Modeled after a North-American style PhD program, the ESSEC program was everything I could have hoped for in terms of matching the rigor and quality of U.S. institutions set within an environment of cultural and intellectual diversity that is present in few places.

This combination highly prepares future scholars to reach their objectives working in top institutions worldwide. That and the care that is put into sharing the knowledge and resources needed to ensure their student's success means you really can't go wrong with this program."

Lisa Baudot, Assistant Professor in Accounting, College of Business Administration, University of Central Florida (USA)
